Hi Everyone,
It's that time again!

Instruction and Research Technology will be holding another Blackboard Institute this May 17th & 19th from 8am to 3:30pm. Instruction and Research Technology (IRT) at William Paterson University offers a Blackboard Institute three times per year during the Summer, Winter, and Spring semester breaks. It is an intensive two-day workshop complete with food, scintillating company, and challenging coursework for all those who have ever or would ever like to create a supplemental, blended or online course.

This is a hands-on immersion workshop in which we exchange information and ideas on Blackboard course design; use the Internet for instructional purposes; incorporate electronic presentations; create original and scanned images as well as digital photographs; learn to understand copyright and fair use policies, and how to maintain electronic instructional materials.

We ask you to bring with you your curriculum materials including, but not limited to, lecture notes, presentations, course outlines, handouts and worksheets in any format, but preferably digital.

All participants are expected to take advantage of all the opportunities the workshop presents. You personally participate in individual and group assignments employing different formats with other faculty of varying levels of experience using Blackboard in their coursework. These formats include electronic documents, small group discussion and electronic discussion forum postings.

With WPUNJ's IRT staff members, you and your Blackboard Institute cohort storm the heights of Blackboard and create wonderful online learning communities for our students and ourselves.
