

1. TITLE OF COURSE AND NUMBER: Winter Session Plein Air Drawing in Florida, ARTS 3990

2. DESCRIPTION OF COURSE: This course is a winter session 6 credit class, which requires travel. Students will travel to Florida during winter session to draw “en plein air” out in the landscape. Students will experience how a landscape artist approaches a new place with unfamiliar flora, pattern, light and color. They will tackle that challenge of deciphering a new environment through use of value, gesture, and perspective. Working representationally or abstractly, students will make a multitude of drawings, beginning with working in black and white, before moving to color. Students are expected to experiment with methods and materials in order to find the best venue for their personal expression of atmosphere and place. Students will keep a journal in which they record, on a daily basis, the descriptive details of the landscape they are discovering. Required reading is journal entries by Georgia O’Keefe, Pissaro and letters by Van Gogh. A research paper will be written on landscape journal writing. The expectation is for students to exhibit their works created during this 6 week course, in a group show curated by Professor Prince. This course will run through winter session and end Feb 15th.
