WPUNJ ACE-NET

Volume 2, Issue 1
November 3, 2010

Words from our Institutional Representative, Jane Austin

Greetings!

It's good to be back and ACE-Net has hit the ground running this semester. As many of you know, ACE-Net's overarching goal is to address the needs of women and the issues relating to women's leadership in higher education. We have several exciting events planned and are dedicated to keeping you connected to resources and events happening at the state level as well. Check out the back of this page for what's happening soon!

WPU's ACE-Net chapter hopes to reach out to the women on campus and provide support for the development of leadership skills while also offering opportunities to network and develop lasting relationships.

So what are we doing at WPU? As your Institutional Representative, I am working with a terrific team of women to spread the word about the organization and set up some events that will hopefully inform and inspire you. We started out with our Annual ACE-Net Breakfast where we welcomed our new President, Kathy Waldron. It was a record turnout of over 80 women (and a few men, too). Dr. Waldron gave us some insights into her career path in higher education which was a fitting way to start out the new academic year for our group.

We're also running a Brown Bag Series so you can network with others on campus whom you otherwise might never have met. The first was a discussion held on October 8th led by Dr. Pixy Ferris on Promotion. The next meeting featured Dr. Elizabeth Haines who discussed her research on "Women in the Workplace" on November 1st. Susan Dinan is in charge of this series of discussions, so feel free to contact her with your ideas. We're also bringing in Dr. Mary Papazian, Provost at Lehman College, who will talk about negotiating what you're worth this Spring so look for more details in the coming weeks.

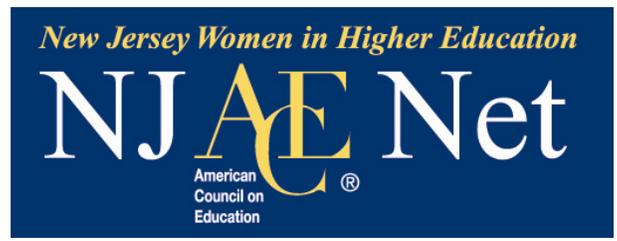

Other items on our agenda this year include the development of a website so we can communicate more efficiently with our members. We will also be researching the feasibility of a mentoring program on campus.

I'd like to encourage each and every one of you to attend the ACE-Net State Conference at Rutgers University on Friday, November 19th from 9:00am to 3:00pm. I know that it seems difficult to fit in yet another meeting, but you will find this a worthwhile event. Please feel free to contact me should you have questions or ideas. ACE-Net is about you so let's work together in building strong networks, support and opportunities.

Best Regards,
Jane

Ignite Your Creative Genius Within
In this new world, creativity and “whole-brainers” will rule the future.
Christine Ranck, PhD

As our everyday world has become more overwhelming and detailed, we have shifted away from our inherent and ancient whole-brain awareness—to a decidedly left-brain focus. Thus, we have little confidence in our intuitive, connective, holistic, compassionate, optimistic, spiritual and creative abilities. We’re on the brink of the most extraordinary global changes in human history. NO ONE knows what this new world will look like. Using the latest discoveries about the brain, fun facts and concepts from quantum physics, as well as images and sound, explore how we can unlock our creative genius and expand our awareness about life and what we’re doing here in the cosmos.

Christine Ranck, PhD, is co-author of the innovative, consciousness-expanding creativity book, Ignite the Genius Within. She is a trauma therapist and psychoanalyst in NYC, and a nationally known motivational speaker on freeing creativity. Her ground-breaking work in healing trauma and enhancing creativity has been featured in numerous newspaper and magazine articles, books, on radio and television, and in several documentary films. She has appeared on many national talk shows, including The Today Show. Christine is also a professional singer whose pop vocal trio, Jukebox Jane, performs all over the world. Christine has brought her creativity workshops to: The Open Center, NYC; Deloitte and Touche; Amnesty International; International Women’s Writing Guild; Lucent Technologies; National Organization for Women, Esalen Institute, United Nations SRC Enlightenment Society, as well as many others.
