There may be instances where some employees designated as essential may not be required to remain at work based on the nature of the emergency that exists. The supervisor will determine who shall remain at work.

Conversely, there may be circumstances when employees not listed in the titles provided are considered essential for a particular emergency. Supervisors in those areas will need to notify employees in advance, if possible, that their job will be essential during a specific work day condition.

All employees should provide the department with their current home/cell telephone number. Employees who are unable to be reached by telephone must contact their department for instructions as to whether they should report to work.

Employees designated as essential who report out sick, during a period designated as an emergency condition, will be required to submit appropriate medical certification for the day (dates) in question. Lack of medical certification may result in the absence being coded as leave without pay. The employee may also be subject to disciplinary action.

In instances of an early closing due to emergency conditions, essential employees are not to leave work prior to the end of their shift, unless notified by their supervisor. Essential employees required to remain at work when there is an early closing, or required to report to work when the University is closed, will be paid at their normal rate of pay during their regular work shift or at emergency rates thereafter in accordance with the applicable negotiated agreement.
