Descriptive Summary:

Creator: Dr. Donald Philip Duclos

Donated by: Dr. Stephen Hahn, Associate Provost & Professor of English

Title: Guide to the Falkner/Faulkner Family Collection

Dates: 1770s- 1980s

Quantity: Research-Related/Scholarly Materials: 1 Box
Microfilm, Slides, Books, Framed Items: 1 Box

Abstract: Collection contains items on the Falkner/Faulkner families, and scholarly materials created by Prof. Donald Duclos related to his doctoral dissertation (1961) at the University of Michigan on Colonel William C. Falkner, an author, politician, lawyer, businessman and soldier, who resided in Mississippi during the 1800s. Duclos' dissertation, Son of Sorrow: The Life, Works and Influence of Colonel William C. Falkner, 1825-1889, was published by International Scholars Publications in 1998. The collection also contains items relating to various other members of the Falkner family, including the Colonel's great-grandson, the Nobel Prize-winning author, William Faulkner.

Biographical Sketches

Falkner, William Clark, July 6, 1825-November 6, 1889

William Clark Falkner was born in Knox County, Tennessee on July 6, 1825, but lived most of his life in Mississippi, eventually becoming a long-term resident of the town of Ripley. Falkner was a prominent lawyer, politician, businessman and soldier, serving in both the Mexican War and the American Civil War, and ultimately rising to the rank of Colonel in the Confederate Army. He was also a prolific author, composing several poems, plays and novels, including The White Rose of Memphis, Rapid Ramblings in Europe and The Siege of Monterey. This made him part of the literary legacy that extended to his great-grandson, William Faulkner. Colonel Falkner was shot and killed by former business partner Richard J. Thurmond on November 6, 1889, concluding a long-standing feud between the two men.

Faulkner, William Cuthbert, September 25, 1897-July 6, 1962

The celebrated twentieth-century author, William Cuthbert Falkner (the “u” was later added, according to some sources, as a signifier of social prominence) was born in New Albany, Mississippi on September 25, 1897. Before his reputation as a regionalist writer brought him international fame, Faulkner worked briefly as a postal clerk and as a script doctor for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in order to obtain a steady income. Heavily influenced by Southern culture, he lived most of his life in Mississippi, where he created the fictional county of Yoknapatawpha that became the central setting of most of his works including the novels, As I Lay Dying and Light in August. Faulkner was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature in 1949. In his acceptance speech, he emphasized the importance every generation of authors should place on writing about timeless, universal truths that affect all of humanity, or as he called them, “the problems of the human heart in conflict with itself,” instead of focusing on momentary concerns whose significance will eventually fade--which at the time of Faulkner’s speech was the Cold War. Faulkner died of a heart attack on July 6, 1962, ironically, the same day that his great-grandfather and literary predecessor, Colonel William Clark Falkner, was born one hundred and thirty-seven years earlier.

Duclos, Donald Philip, 1932-1988

Donald Philip Duclos was a faculty member at Paterson State College/William Paterson College in Wayne, New Jersey. During his tenure with the institution, from 1961 until 1988, Duclos served Paterson State/William Paterson both in an administrative capacity and as a Professor of English. His 1961 University of Michigan doctoral dissertation on Colonel William C. Falkner created a seminal work on the Falkner family. The dissertation, Son of Sorrow: The Life, Works and Influence of Colonel William C. Falkner, 1825-1889, was published by International Scholars Publications in 1998. Although Duclos' primary area of interest focused on Colonel Falkner, Duclos is also considered an authority on William Faulkner. He wrote several scholarly papers on the Colonel's great-grandson, and taught a seminar course on the Nobel Prize-winning author. Duclos died in 1988.

Scope and Content Note

The items contained in this collection date from the 1770s to the 1980s. The collection primarily consists of materials related to Duclos' research on the Falkner family: notes, maps, correspondence, reviews, articles, genealogies, bibliographies, biographies, plot outlines, legal documents, and transcriptions of records. The collection also includes several scholarly papers written by Donald Duclos about the Falkners, some of Duclos' professional papers, resources for teaching William Faulkner and early drafts of different sections of his dissertation. The collection also contains several of Duclos' published essays, as well as materials related to conferences that Duclos attended throughout his professional career. Also are items related to Mary Celine Davidow's (a colleague of Duclos at William Paterson) study of the author Charlotte Mew in which she tries to establish a relationship between Mew and the author Thomas Hardy, and a copy of Davidow's dissertation which Duclos may have utilized as a model for his own dissertation on Colonel Falkner.

Non-print materials include slides documenting Duclos' trip to Lafayette County, Mississippi and his presentation at the annual William Faulkner conference held there each summer. The collection features several framed photographs of the Falkners, microfilm reels of text referencing Colonel Falkner and his writings, and several paperback copies of William Faulkner's novels. However, there is a copy of Men Working, written by William's younger brother John, and a hardcover book of photographs entitled William Faulkner: The Cofield Collection, inscribed by the author, Jack Cofield (the book has unfortunately been cut up in places).

Several unique items of significance are: letters to Duclos from Bama Falkner McLean (the Colonel's daughter), as well as correspondence from other family members and acquaintances; an autograph of Jimmy Faulkner (William's brother); and a letter from Gus Green to Dinah Almerth, dated December 16, 1948, that offers substantial evidence that the Colonel may have had a "shadow family" (this letter can be found in Folder F-32, Box 1).

Arrangement Note

The items in this collection are arranged in two boxes. Box 1 contains 41 folders primarily consisting of paper materials. The folders, for the most part, are arranged chronologically; where possible, they are also arranged according to the type of papers they contain. The folders in this box chiefly consist of three series: textual, correspondence, and research/scholarly/professional. As some of these areas overlap, for example, a folder of correspondence may contain several research-related items, that may appear in the research series, as opposed to the correspondence series. Note: because chronology is the main criterion for arrangement, it takes precedence in how the folders are organized. For example, items that primarily reference Colonel Falkner during his lifetime appear much earlier in the collection than items focusing mainly on his great-grandson, William Faulkner. The first series of folders, textual material, consists primarily of items related to works written by Colonel William C. Falkner, and some of Duclos' notes on the Colonel. The second series of folders contain Duclos' correspondence. The third series relates to scholarly conferences, publications, research, resources, and Duclos' professional projects.

Box 2 contains artifacts that are arranged by material type. The items in this box include microfilm, slides, books and framed items relating to the Falkner/Faulkner family.
